

I have just recently learned that the FCC will allow consolidation of many forms of media. I don't see how this is in the public interest. It allows a few corporations to control the content of the media to their own benefit, not the publics. It also allows a few big corporations to control the agenda and gives them enormous political power that is not good for a democratic government.

Robert Mosca